Under Section 11 (third party) of the Act, all the private industries, banks or any other firms, which has some kind of business dealings/contractual relationships with the public authorities, are covered. Citizens can ask for information about these firms from the public authorities, which maintain their records.

1. Third Party has no absolute right to refuse information disclosure about it [Sec. 11(1) of the RTI Act]

Case: In the case of K.K. Mahajan vs. Cantonment Executive Office (CIC/AT/A/2006/00014, dated 22/5/2006), the appellant, an employee of a public authority, had applied for some information relating to the prosecution of another employee (third party), because under similar circumstances the appellant was convicted while the other employee was exonerated.

The public authority refused to provide him the information he had asked for on the ground that the third party had refused the disclosure of information about it to the applicant.

Judgment: The CIC held that the RTI Act does not give a third party an automatic right to order the public information officer (PIO) of a public authority, not to disclose information pertaining to it.

The CIC further held that the public authority is required to evaluate the third party's case in terms of the provisions of Section 8(1)(j) and Section 11(1) of the RTI Act, 2005, and find out that the information asked is not barred from disclosure.

Even if the information is barred from disclosure then the public authority is to examine if it would be in the public interest to disclose the information sought and its disclosure will outweigh harm if any to the individual third party.

The public authority has to arrive at the findings by properly assessing the facts and circumstances of the case. A speaking order should thereafter be passed accordingly.

Provisions involved:

Section 8(1) - Notwithstanding anything contained in this Act, there shall be no obligation to give any citizen,—

(j) information which relates to personal information, the disclosure of which has no relationship to any public activity or interest, or which would cause unwarranted invasion of the privacy of the individual unless the Central Public Information Officer or the State Public Information Officer or the appellate authority, as the case may be, is satisfied that the larger public interest justifies the disclosure of such information:

Provided that the information which cannot be denied to the Parliament or a State Legislature shall not be denied to any person.

Section 11(1) has already been quoted in Case No.15.
